Bringing together over fifty leading global experts, this research handbook provides a state of the art overview of research findings regarding human resource management (HRM) in the public sector. Original chapters provide useful insights from two different disciplines: public administration and HRM. They illustrate that the public context of organisations matters and discuss research findings detailing how this plays out in practice.

A fundamental but mostly hidden transformation is happening in the way public services are being delivered and in the way local and national governments fulfill their policy goals. Government executives are redefining their core responsibilities away from managing workers and providing services directly to orchestrating networks of public, private and nonprofit organizations to deliver the services that government once did itself. Authors Stephen Goldsmith and William D. Eggers call this new model governing by network and maintain that the new approach is a dramatically different type of endeavor that simply managing divisions of employees like any changes of such magnitude it poses major challenges for those in charge. Faced by a web of relationships and partnerships that increasingly make up modern governance, public managers must grapple with skill set issues, managing a contract to capture value, technology issues, incompatible information systems, communications issues, one partner in the network for example might possess more information than another and cultural issues. How interplay among varied public, private and nonprofit sector cultures can create unproductive dissonance, governing by network examines for the first time how managers on both sides of the aisle public and private are coping with the changes drawing from dozens of case studies as well as established best practices the authors tell us what works and what doesn't here is a clear roadmap for actually governing the networked state for elected officials business executives and the broader public public sector innovation is important because the pressures of growing expectations from citizens budget crunches and a surge of complex governance problems cannot be solved by standard government solutions or increased funding in order to innovate government increasingly needs to collaborate with networks of partners across agency boundaries and especially with the nonprofit and private sectors to find new solutions this interaction within a network can enhance creative and effective governance solutions in this book jacob torfing closely examines the link between network based collaborative governance and innovation proposes a framework for the study of collaborative innovation and discusses this approach in light of theoretical insights from other disciplines and from examples of public innovation drawn from the united states europe and australia this book will move scholars closer to being able to develop a theory of collaborative innovation this first of its kind survey covers both the basics of information technology and the managerial and political issues surrounding the use of these technologies unlike other works on information systems this book is written specifically for the public sector and addresses unique public sector issues and concerns the technical basics are explained in clear english with as little technical jargon as possible so that readers can move on to informed analysis of the public policy issues surrounding government's use of mis this practical tool includes end of chapter summaries with bridges to upcoming chapters numerous boxed exhibits thorough end of chapter notes and a bibliography for further reading
