lecture notes from the year 2018 in the subject didactics common didactics educational objectives methods language english abstract generally there needs to be a logical connection between the issues of the case before the court and the evidence that stands to be admitted in order for it to be relevant this logical relevance is a matter of common sense but is easily complicated by any attempt to define it in greater detail we will give you two examples one involving facts that are clearly highly relevant and the other referring to facts that are clearly irrelevant the accused is charged with shoplifting the facts that the owner of the shop saw her taking an item from a shelf hiding it under her sweater walking out of the shop without paying for the item and being caught outside the shop in possession of an item with the shop s price tag on it are all clearly relevant to the question whether the accused stole that particular item seminar paper from the year 2011 in the subject business economics business management corporate governance grade a union graduate college course managing ethically in a global environment language english abstract what is the primary responsibility of a manager this question is an old one however in the light of several incidents in recent years some examples are the financial crisis the bp oil spill and the enron scandal it seems to be a more a present day problem than ever before the traditional answer to it is also mirrored in business law and states that managers are agents of the stockholders and work solely for their benefit this view is commonly referred to as the stockholder view the contrary position to this is the stakeholder view it asserts that in addition to stockholders managers have also a fiduciary duty to employees customers and other stakeholders including the stockholders in this paper arguments both for and against each view will be presented it will also be claimed that acting in strict accordance to one of the theories is an inappropriate way of managing a company for ethical and practical reasons rather the opposing views do not necessarily exclude each other a synthesis of the two contrasts is not impossible as it can be seen in the recently developed concept of the triple bottom line
