Background and Context of the Triangle Fire

The Garment Industry in Early 20th Century America

At the dawn of the 20th century, America was rapidly industrializing. The garment industry, centered in New York City's bustling sweatshops, employed thousands of immigrant women and young workers striving for economic stability. These factories were characterized by:

- Poor working conditions
- Long hours (often 12-14 hours a day)
- Low wages
- Lack of safety measures

Many factories operated in cramped, poorly ventilated spaces, with little regard for worker safety, driven by the relentless pursuit of profit.

Conditions Leading to the Tragedy

The Triangle Waist Company, located in the Asch Building (later renamed the Equitable Building), was one such factory. On March 25, 1911, a fire broke out on the eighth floor. Contributing factors included:

- Flammable materials, such as fabric scraps and paper patterns
- Locked doors to prevent theft, which trapped workers inside
- Insufficient fire escapes and inadequate safety measures

The factory's management prioritized security and efficiency over worker safety, a common attitude in the industry at the time.
